

Costello Family Archive

The Costello Family owned Windsor Station near Charters Towers. Henry Hurle sold the station in 1914 to Patrick Maurice Costello of Charters Towers. The Costello and Bell Families were contemporaries and socialised together. See the Bell Family Archive at 341R. Maud Bell is mentioned in one of Andrew Costello's letters.

This collection consists of thirteen handwritten letters, one telegram, and four small photographs. Most of the letters were written by Andrew Costello who served as a pilot in the Royal Air Force in World War Two. The addresses on the envelopes indicate that family members, when not at Windsor Station, Charters Towers, would stay at Lowth's Hotel in Townsville. One letter written by a fellow-pilot of Andrew's to Andrew's mother, dated 3 July 1941, states, "It grieves me deeply to have to write to you today of the tragic passing of a well loved friend and comrade of ours - your son Andrew." There are several newspaper articles about Andrew Costello. See below:

FIRST CASUALTY IN R.A.A.F. SPITFIRE MEN

Sergeant-Pilot A. G. Costello, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Q. Costello, of Windsor Station, Charters Towers, was the first casualty in Australia's Spitfire squadron in England. He was killed when he crashed in Lincolnshire in a night fight with an enemy plane.

Formerly a member of the Royal Queensland Aero Club, holding an "A" pilot's licence, he joined the R.A.A.F. in July, 1940, and trained at Narromine and in Canada. He arrived in England in February, and was recommended for a commission in June. He is buried in Kirton Lindsey, Lincolnshire.
